The Learning Curve by Barry Newton

As I grew up, occasionally my mother would quote a proverb along these lines:

“When those who insist on learning from the school of experience finally graduate, they’re too old to do anything.”

When God recruited Isaiah to preach, God instructed Isaiah to use the strong medicine of sarcasm. In this case, the sarcasm appears to have been intended to function like reverse psychology. The divine prescription provided a perfect last ditch effort calling for changed hearts.

While an obedient child will gladly conform to a straightforward message, the contrary child can challenge you every step of the way seemingly motivated by nothing more than proving you wrong. Tell him to stop, he will go. Tell him to run, he will stop.

Accordingly, God instructed Isaiah to proclaim to his people:

“Be ever hearing, but never understanding; be ever seeing, but never perceiving. ... Otherwise, they might ... understand with their hearts, and turn and be healed.” Isaiah 6:9,10 (Continued inside)

Unfortunately, they did not take the bait. So the lesson had to be learned the hard way. Assyria would come and unleash God's discipline upon them for failing to repent.

But God later also instructed Isaiah to speak of a hopeful future for those surviving the major surgery.

"In that day the remnant of Israel, the survivors of the house of Jacob, will no longer rely on him (Assyria) who struck them down, but will truly rely upon the LORD." Isaiah 10:20

Like God's people in millennia past, God's word has come to us as well. When we hear God's messages about how we ought to trust in him and live as disciples, how do we respond? Are we quick learners or do we insist upon going through the school of experience?
